THE ROYAL BOTANIC GARDENS, KEW

The Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew was founded in 1759 and declared a UNESCO World Heritage Site in 2003. Spanning over three hundred acres in South West London, the gardens are renowned for their royal heritage, historic listed buildings, iconic glasshouses and vast range of rare and beautiful plants.

Throughout the past 250 years, the organisation has amassed a spectacularly diverse collection of over 30,000 living plants, millions of preserved specimens and thousands of original botanical illustrations and drawings.

Kew's second garden in West Sussex, England, is home to the Millennium Seed Bank. As the world's largest plant conservation programme, the Millennium Seed Bank houses almost two million seeds with the aim of saving and preserving a number of species from extinction.

A world famous centre of excellence for both horticultural research and conservation, the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew has earned its reputation as a global resource on the science and history of plants.

Now, renowned homeware company Lubkowski Saunders & Associates Ltd brings design its design expertise and quality craftsmanship to new and exclusively developed Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew-licensed collections.

Inspired by Kew's plants and flowers, complementary designs across glass drinkware and mouthblown accessories are individually decorated with assorted botanical illustrations. Every product or assorted set is gift boxed in packaging printed with its botanical décor and stamped with the iconic Kew Gardens roundel logo.

Fragaria vesca* · Strawberry

Synonymous with British summertime, this wild strawberry is found in woodlands and forest clearings.

Seeded fruits and serrated leaves form in clusters along the plant's slender stalks. First recorded in Greek and Roman literature and cultivated in ancient Persia, the seeds were traded and transported to the ends of the Silk Road, where the plant still grows extensively today.

Anthriscus sylvestris* · Cow Parsley

Quintessentially British, cow parsley is often found in the countryside nestled amongst meadow grasses and near river banks.

Recognisable by its fern-shaped leaves and splayed white flowers, cow parsley is also known as Queen Anne's lace. Queen Anne often travelled throughout the kingdom during the month of May, which is when the plant first begins to appear, leading people to believe that the roadside had been decorated especially in her honour.

Taraxacum officinale* · Dandelion

The English name 'dandelion' derives from the French 'dent de lion', meaning lion's tooth, which refers to the plant's jagged leaves.

Dandelion's familiar bright yellow florets, windborne seed heads and toothed leaves have a number of culinary applications and were once enjoyed as a delicacy by the Victorian gentry and is also recognised for its medicinal properties as a herbal remedy.
